THE PAPER FOR ALL HACKNEY PEOPLE

Circulated to 108,000 homes and businesses in Hackney

Issue 237 9 August 2010

Two years to go

Children from Hackney give four-times Olympic gold medalist Michael Johnson a run for his money on the London 2012 Olympic Park race track

LOCAL youngsters made the headlines as they helped mark two years to go until London 2012.

The Hackney group joined Olympians and Paralympians past and present, including cyclist Sir Chris Hoy, swimmer

Ellie Simmonds, hurdler Sally Gunnell, middle distance runner Seb Coe (who led London's bid for the 2012 Games) and US sprinter Michael Johnson to tour the Olympic Stadium, where they were interviewed by the BBC, and even got a chance to race the 400m world record holder down the home straight.

GREEN WITH PRIDE

By

THERE were celebrations when Hackney was awarded three new Green Flags, which recognise the UK's best green spaces.

National environmental charity Keep Britain Tidy awarded the prestigious flags to parks in Hackney, which brings the total in the borough to 12 – among the highest in London. The new Green Flag parks are Well Street Common, E9; Cassland Gardens, E9; and Clapton Square, E5.

These are in addition to the nine sites that have retained Green Flag status in 2010. St John's Churchyard, E8 has also kept its status as a Green Heritage site, one of only 13 in London.

The Council celebrated the announcement at Well Street Common, where Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services proudly raised one of the latest Green Flags.

He said: "Five years ago Hackney only had one award for its parks; now we have 12. This is a wonderful achievement that demonstrates how far we have come in making sure that residents and visitors have access to the welcoming, safe, clean and pleasant areas they deserve. Congratulations to the staff, user groups and local organisations who have worked so hard to look after our valuable green spaces."

St Mary's Secret Garden, E2, achieved a Green Pennant award – given to community and voluntary groups who successfully manage their own public spaces.

East Reservoir Community Garden, run by London Wildlife Trust; and Hackney Community Tree Nursery and Edible Forest Garden, run by Hackney Marshes User Group also retained their pennants.

The award scheme is the national standard for parks and green spaces in England and Wales.

It encourages a high level of environmental standards, creating a benchmark of excellence. To be eligible for an award, parks must also submit a five-year plan for continued maintenance and improvement.

Message from the Mayor

Counting down to the Games

ACROSS London there have been events to mark the fact that there are now only two years until the Olympic and Paralympic Games begin in 2012.

The Games always succeed in being a great spectacle for its global audience. For the places where they are held, like Hackney, success must be judged differently – by the impact on the local community and what is left behind.

Inevitably, there are physical legacies – the athletes' village that becomes new homes, the sports facilities and parkland. However, our expectations are greater – the Games were won not only because of London's cultural diversity, but also the social and economic benefits that it was promised the event would leave behind. In short, that means jobs.

Work to build the Olympic Park and the competition itself are over by 2012, so were never going to provide long-term jobs directly. But they were meant to deliver training and entry-level jobs, draw people in who hadn't worked before through volunteering, and act as a catalyst for future opportunities.

The Olympic Park had to be created fast, and not enough local people were taken on for training and to build it. So it must now fall to the Games themselves to provide more opportunities for local people. Although they too will be temporary, they can be a pathway to long-term employment.

During Games time, tens of thousands of people will be employed in jobs associated with the event. I am pressing the Games organisers on what needs to be done – by them, by colleges, by training providers, and by us – to maximise the opportunities for residents.

Hackney is also working hard to ensure 2012 leaves a regeneration legacy of permanent jobs for residents, and to secure our long-term vision for the broadcast and media centres as a location for creative industries.

The official London 2012 Volunteer Programme has just been launched to recruit up to 70,000 volunteers for the Games. Volunteering is a great way to get involved and gain experience, skills and training to improve job prospects. Hackney's own Personal Best programme has already helped hundreds of residents develop new skills and gain a recognised qualification in volunteering. Graduates of the programme will be guaranteed an interview to volunteer during the Games.

So whether it's volunteering, training or long-term employment, Hackney will not forget what the Games were meant to deliver for East London and, more importantly, we won't let others forget either.

LOCKNER estate residents got the chance to try out the latest urban craze during an event to celebrate community spirit.

Expert tuition in free running was on offer as part of a series of activities to mark the Big Lunch on 18 July. People of all ages had a go at the popular fitness activity, which involves leaping and jumping through the urban environment.

The workshop was taught by a professional free-running instructor and organised by Lockner and Kingsgate Residents Association. The day also involved sharing food with their neighbours and staging live music performances.

It formed part of the wider campaign, Big Lunch, which sees communities all over the country organising mini-street festivals to share food, culture and stories with their neighbours.

Danny Turton, a Lockner estate resident, said: "The event was really good fun and I got to meet many local people from the estate. It was great that we could do the free running sessions. The instructor was amazing and it was interesting to see the estate through his eyes."

Now in its second year, The Big Lunch campaign was created by the Eden Project to encourage and build upon community spirit nationwide.

Free micro-chipping for dogs

HACKNEY Homes residents with a dog still have a chance to get their pet micro-chipped for free.

Safety road shows this summer have seen Dogs Trust staff micro-chipping dogs, as well as offering specialist advice, plus low cost vaccinations and treatment.

The offer is open to all Hackney Homes tenants and leaseholders. A £5 offer is available for all other Hackney residents. Proof of address is required.

Residents can also report issues that they are concerned about in their area to Hackney Homes staff.

The road shows take place on: 12 Aug at Sherry Wharf Estate; 17 Aug at Banister House Estate; 9 Sept at Wrens Park Estate; and 21 Sept at Fellows Court Estate.

Young people celebrated with sporting stars past and present, as London reached the two-year mark of the start of the 2012 Olympic Games.

The Hackney group made headlines worldwide on 27 July as they tested out some of the 2012 arenas. Sir Chris Hoy, multi-gold winning Olympic cyclist, was the first to ride the near completed Velodrome track, followed tentatively by the Mayor of London, Boris Johnson. At the basketball court, youngsters joined John Amaechi, the British former Orlando Magic and Utah Jazz basketball star, and Paralympian and TV presenter Ade Adepitan.

The main stadium is also taking spectacular shape, with a temporary 100m track tested out by the young people and 400m world record holder, Michael Johnson, although on this occasion he was beaten over the shorter distance by 10-year-old

Monique Williams. She said: "When it started I was behind in the race then I caught up to everyone else. He told me 'well done' after. The day was really good." The group – who were interviewed by the BBC – was made up of Hackney 2012 Youth Ambassadors, who promote the Games to other young people, and primary pupils who took part in Hackney's Personal Bests sports programme.

In addition, an appeal was launched for volunteers to help with ticket checking, uniform distribution, staffing helpdesks and more during the Games. A total of 70,000 London 2012 'Games Makers' are needed to help at the Olympic Park, as well as 8,000 'London Ambassadors' to guide the millions of visitors travelling across the capital to the arenas.

Tickets for London 2012 are set to go on sale in spring 2011, but registration is still open. To date, more than 1.4million people have signed up.

NEWS IN BRIEF

£1m for Hackney Wick

HACKNEY Wick is set to receive a £1million investment from the Big Lottery Fund (BIG).

It will be one of the first 50 places in the country to benefit from the funding, earmarked to improve regional neighbourhoods. An independent charitable trust will be set up to run the programme, and BIG is looking for individuals and community groups to get involved and help run it. The funds will not be available until autumn 2011, but in the meantime, the Council will be working with local people and BIG over the coming year to identify which projects the money could be spent on.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "We are delighted that Hackney Wick is due to receive this substantial cash injection to help pay for the community projects and initiatives that residents most want to see happening on their doorsteps." BIG plans to invest up to £200million over the next decade to help regenerate 150 urban and rural neighbourhoods. The deadline to apply to join the Hackney Wick trust is 12 August. Mayor's Business Awards short list

The short list for the Mayor of Hackney's Business Awards 2010 has been announced.

Now in its fifth year, the annual awards recognise and celebrate the quality of businesses in the borough. Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, was joined on the judging panel by Sinclair Beecham MBE, owner of the Hoxton Hotel; Ian King, Deputy Business Editor of The Times and Hackney resident; Yvonne Thompson CBE, one of the founders of Choice FM; and Dave Blake, Publishing Director at newspaper group Archant London. Mayor Pipe said: "The standard of entries this year has been very high, and the judges and I were extremely impressed. Small and medium-sized businesses are at the heart of Hackney's local economy and the number of high quality entries we received shows that entrepreneurship is continuing to thrive in the borough despite the difficult economic climate."

The short list is: Best in the business: HCT Group; Boulevard Catering & Events; Point Blank. Green: Green Bottle Unit; The Green Man & Van. Creative or media: Dezeen Limited; Brickwall Films; Vjem Events. Social Enterprise: Renaisi Ltd; HCT Group. New: Pages of Hackney; Lock 7 Ltd; Dezeen Limited. Leisure or entertainment: Boulevard Catering & Events; Vjem Events; Fun Events Corporate Services Limited. Winners will be revealed at a reception on 14 September.

Young people curated Sunday's World In Motion day, a collaboration between the Council, Shoreditch Trust, Barbican, and Guildhall School of Music and Drama, in which more than 400 young people, aged 11 to 24, took part.

Performances also included Hackney's eight-piece band Lazy Habits and a Roots of Reggae programme featuring The Viceroy, Gilzene and The Blue Lights, Mento Band and Bomba Estéreo.

The festival was organised by Shoreditch Trust and formed part of CREATE – a celebration of culture delivered by some of the top producers, arts centres, galleries, museums and theatres in the five host boroughs for the London 2012 Games.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: “As a host borough for the 2012 Games, we want to inspire as many residents as possible to try new sports and keep active.

“The adiZone will create a new space where people can meet socially and enjoy getting fit at the same time.”

Nick Craggs from adidas said: “As a London 2012 sponsor, adidas believes it is vitally important that free sporting facilities are made available and accessible if we are truly going to get the nation participating in sport.”

The adiZone is part of Council improvements to Mabley Green, informed by residents’ feedback.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Cllr Middleton

COUNCILLOR Maureen Middleton of New River Ward, North Hackney, has passed away after suffering a heart attack. She was 68.

First elected as a councillor in 1998, Cllr Middleton was committed to representing the borough and highly valued by her constituents.

She served on many committees during her time as a councillor, and following the 2010 election was a member of the Health in Hackney Scrutiny Commission; Inner North East London Joint Overview & Scrutiny Commission for Health; Living in Hackney Scrutiny Commission; and North East Neighbourhood Committee.

Councillors and the Mayor of Hackney expressed their regret at the death of Cllr Middleton, and sent their condolences to her friends and family, paying tribute to her years of work in her local community and tireless commitment to taking up cases on behalf of her constituents.

A by-election for New River ward will be held in the near future. See the next edition of Hackney Today for details.

Safety news for every ward

THE Safer Hackney ward newsletters are produced by the police and Council and circulated to each household in the borough, every eight to ten weeks.

Full of crime and community safety information about your local area, the newsletters also keep you up-to-date with information on how to report a crime or anti-social behaviour, and offer crime prevention advice.

Your latest Safer Hackney newsletter should have been delivered along with this edition of Hackney Today. If you have not received it, but would like to see a copy in pdf format, e-mail:

Constructive date

SPEED dating with a difference took place when Hackney construction trainees met up with contractors on a 20-year Council regeneration project.

More than 40 people attended the event on 3 August, where residents including Hackney Community College construction students discussed training and employment with subcontractors working for Berkeley Homes, the Council’s development partner for the regeneration of Woodberry Down.

The Council and partners are currently building more than 4,500 new homes on the site, including affordable housing, a community centre, health centre, new academy, and extended primary school, as well as retail and commercial

During July, HCC students did work experience at Woodberry Down, carrying out repairs with materials from Berkeley Homes, and facilities provided by Mulalley, a contractor carrying out repairs for existing homes here as I live in the next block.”

The event was organised by Berkeley Homes, Manor House Development Trust and recruitment brokerage On Site, on behalf of Woodberry Works.

Be part of a town centre farm

RESIDENTS are invited to roll up their sleeves and help transform an empty shop in Dalston into a working farm. Eco-designers Something & Son will create Farm:Shop at 20 Dalston Lane, E8, and are looking for volunteers to get stuck in until the grand opening in September.

Mini fish farms, rooftop chicken coops and an indoor ‘hydroponic’ allotment are among the innovations volunteers will help to create.

Farm:Shop is the second in a series of projects supported by the Council to bring empty shops back to life.

The projects are financed by Government funding awarded to the Council, and are designed to provide temporary activities that will benefit residents and visitors.

Farm volunteer days will run every Saturday at 20 Dalston Lane, E8, from 10am-7pm, until 18 September. For info e-mail: someone@somethingandson.com

The Games begin

By

YOUNG residents have been trying their hand at new sports – including some that will feature in the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

The Hackney Homes Games on 24 July in Haggerston Park were part of a series of summer sporting activities for young people. Coaches have been out and about, working with youth groups on three estates – Fellows Court, Hawksley Court and Fawcett – teaching everything from javelin to handball, and the fun day was a chance to try out new found skills. The park hosted an array of games, sports, music, dancing and more.

Over 500 residents of all ages came along to try everything from running and jumping, to football and basketball, as well as traditional sports day events like the fancy dress races that brought a smile to many faces.

Resident Colin Naylar, said: “It was very good and they should have more – the best so far.”

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, added: “This event was a great opportunity for residents to find out what the Olympic and Paralympic Games are all about and get a taste of some of the sports on offer in the borough.

“Hackney’s role as a host for London’s Olympic Park, is to inspire residents of all ages and abilities to join in, have some fun and get ready to welcome the world to Hackney in 2012.”

The event was organised by Hackney Homes, in partnership with the Council’s 2012 Olympic and Paralympic team.

The next Hackney Homes Games takes place on 22 August in Springfield Park.

 Hackney

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

Thinking outside the record box

By
Marcel Reinard

IT'S just as well the inexhaustible music encyclopaedia locked in the vaults of Gilles Peterson's head has no bearing on his actual record collection in N4.

After years of seeking out just about every genre and sub-genre, from 1950s folk to bedroom dub-step, the BBC Radio 1 DJ finally lost the battle with his ever-increasing horde of vinyl.

"I was living on Brownswood Road, but it was when I had children and the collection was too big that we moved to Stoke Newington. Now I live there and walk across Clissold Park to get to the studio," he says.

The old house is also the base of his new company Brownswood Recordings.

Twenty-five years at the top has furnished him a not undeserved mantle as a music taste-maker and a risk-taker tapping into artists working outside conventions. That's not to say he doesn't know a good chart tune when he hears one: the back catalogue of artists he produced became the cornerstone of UK soul in the early 1990s – Jamiroquai, Brand New Heavies, Incognito and Young Disciples.

He began his career on pirate stations in the 1980s, spinning records at London soul nights, one of many being Special Branch at the Royal Oak in South London with the rest of the capital's DJ royalty.

I couldn't be living in a better part of the world right now, let alone London

"I'd play upstairs and downstairs it was Danny Rampling, Paul Oakenfold and Nicky Holloway. That lasted four years, a very important weekly club. Out of it came nearly everything that we have today in the UK," he claims.

His name became synonymous with acid jazz, a warped, electronic take on jazz funk. It started as 'just a joke', his and a friend's answer to 1980s acid house.

He says: "It was a great time, but after two years I was beginning to feel the sound, the music, and acid jazz name was ghetto-ing itself, it was becoming a mod thing, a retro thing."

Setting up his own Talkin' Loud label – a name taken from his Camden club night – with Norman Jay, he had numerable successes along the musical spectrum. Legal stations picked up on his talent too and his CV includes Jazz FM – before his show was axed for 'inappropriate' music and his anti-war comments during the first Gulf War in 1991 – Kiss FM when it first received its licence, and the BBC.

And he still presents the Radio 1 Worldwide show, currently in its tenth year. Not bad for someone who began his career setting up his own station as a teenager with an aerial suspended between a tree and a phone box.

Now in Hackney for 20 years, he continues to be amazed by the music on offer locally.

"I didn't think there was much of a music scene here for ages, but obviously now it's a complete explosion, it's incredible, it's never been better, whether it's Stoke Newington, Shoreditch or Dalston, Hackney is unbelievable; I couldn't be living in a better part of the world right now, let alone London.

"The main thing is just what's happening with the exposure – it's gone from Shoreditch and now it's hitting Stoke Newington and you've got places like Café Oto in Dalston and all these great places," he says.

His new big project is Havana Cultura: a collaboration of previously unknown Cuban singers and rappers, himself and talented pianist Roberto Fonseca.

"There weren't that many people taking risks in Cuba. Obviously there are brilliant musicians, but it's all quite safe and what you would expect. For me it's about finding the cracks between the pavement to find where the real radicals were living," he adds.

Now touring with a selection of the artists featured on the album, in typical style, he's already looking to the next project.

He says: "I want to get some new producers from around the world and get Cuban vocalists. People like Diplo; getting the cutting edge producers of electronic music into Cuba to spend time recording stuff with a lot of these artists and see what comes out of the experiment."

With such a successful career, it's hard to pin him down on the highlights: "I've been able to play everywhere – it's all good. I've met all my heroes, though I still need to do an interview with Herbie Hancock. I haven't spent time with him yet.

"It really doesn't feel like 25 years, I'm still as active as I ever was," he says.

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I bought fresh pasta from the supermarket the other day and got very confused with the 'use by', 'sell by' and 'best before' labelling! Which one should I read to ensure that my food won't go to waste?

A: Around a third of people treat 'best before' as 'use by' when, in fact, it is the latter that they should be paying attention to. Never eat products after the date shown on the 'use by' label, but check to see if the food can be frozen if you need to eat it at a later date. The 'best before' label refers to quality rather than food safety. Foods with a 'best before' date should be safe to eat, but may no longer be at their best. Finally, the 'sell by' label is used by shop staff, not shoppers, to help with stock control.

Wasting food costs the average family with children £56 per month and has serious environmental implications. Love Food Hate Waste is a national campaign to highlight the amount of food waste that could be avoided if we change the way we cook, plan weekly shopping, and use leftovers. For tips visit: www.lovefoodhatewaste.com

£10k garden finals

By
Sarah Menz

TWO Hackney primary schools have been short listed for a chance to win their own £10,000 wildlife garden.

Sir Thomas Abney and Jubilee primaries are through to the final round of the London-wide Veolia Wild Green School competition.

Entrants had to design a garden and explain how they would use it and look after it. Teachers, parents and pupils will present their ideas to a judging panel in the autumn. The winning school will have its design finalised by London Wildlife Trust and the garden is due to be completed by spring 2011.

Geraldine Fitzmaurice, Headteacher at Sir Thomas Abney primary, said: "This is an amazing opportunity to make science learning come alive and is great for local wildlife."

Kerry Joseph, from Jubilee Primary, added: "We're absolutely delighted to be short listed.

This will help with our focus on outdoor learning.

"We've just renamed our classes after trees, and in the autumn we will be planting the tree that each class is named after in our school grounds. The children are very excited about this."

The competition is part of environmental services company Veolia's Wild Green Schools Project, which aims to encourage schools to create and improve wildlife areas.

Do you have some land to share with Hackney food growers?

Get on my land and get growing

THE Council is supporting an online matchmaker that brings together food growers and people with land to spare.

Founded in 2009, Landshare is a national initiative to help make Britain's open spaces more productive, and fresh local fruit and veg readily accessible to all. So far, it has set up a growing community, with over 50,000 members across the UK.

By signing up, residents can create a profile to find or offer space around Hackney. The website maps out landowners and growers by their postcode.

Hackney already has an army of hopeful growers, but land offers are still thin on the ground.

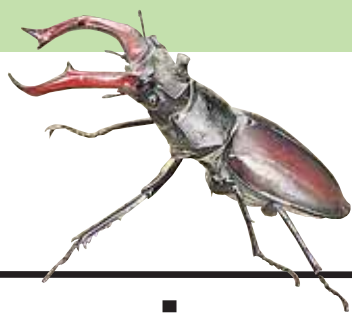

Sophie Linden, Cabinet Member for Crime, Sustainability and Customer Services, said: "Landshare is a positive project to get behind.

"I would encourage Hackney residents who have land they would like to share, or an interest in growing their own fresh produce to visit the website."

Landshare has already seen over 3,000 acres of land offered nationwide. It was set up after Hugh Fearnley-Whittingstall's Channel 4 show, River Cottage, helped Bristol families grow vegetables on derelict land.

Bugging out in Springfield Park

By Danielle Beattie

HACKNEY'S parks are opening the doors to all manner of creepy crawlies in an effort to entice more wildlife into the borough's green spaces.

In June, three of Hackney's Park Rangers and 15 volunteers worked with the London Wildlife Trust to create nine new insect 'loggeries' in Springfield Park. The partially buried logs will provide a habitat for a number of interesting insects including the rare stag beetle.

As a local nature reserve, Springfield Park

Building the loggeries (above); a stag beetle (top) and Springfield Park and House (inset)

is the perfect location for these 'dead wood homes' and it is expected that dozens of species of beetles and bugs will soon be drawn to the area.

New wildlife homes will be created in many of Hackney's parks over the coming months – part of the Council's biodiversity action plan – and there will be opportunities for residents to help create them.

Keeping a watch on the Cockney sparrows

THE iconic Cockney sparrow is continuing to decline in numbers, according to an annual survey of British birds. Conducted by the RSPB with the British Trust for Ornithology and the Joint Nature Conservation Committee, it found that song thrushes and house sparrows have declined more in London than elsewhere in England. The capital is also the only region in which mallard and blackbird numbers have fallen. House sparrow numbers dropped by 68 per cent, compared with figures recorded in 1995. The RSPB has a research project underway in London to investigate the causes.

However, researchers found that robins, blue tits, great tits, magpies, chaffinches, greenfinches and goldfinches have all increased more in London than in any other English region. For more info on garden birds and how to support them visit: www.rspb.org.uk

London Fields pupils enjoy 'splat the rat', football shoot-outs, a bouncy castle, games and various stalls

Fete to remember

By
Marcel Reinard

CHILDREN at London Fields Primary School were raising money for a new climbing frame and an ongoing campaign to support education and orphanages in Ethiopia at their summer fete. The 16 July event offered bouncy castles, games,

“No-one managed to splat the rat, but there was a lot of shrieking with anticipation” raffles, face-painting, cake stalls, a jumble sale, and competitions for children and older attendees. There was also a football shooting game for budding future sports stars.

One visitor noted particular interest in ‘Splat the Rat’ – where children from the E8 school had to test their reflexes by hammering an unseen rodent toy. She said: “No one managed to do it, but there was a lot of shrieking with anticipation.”

NEWS IN BRIEF

Around the world

A CELEBRATION of culture from across the world has taken place at Whitmore Primary School in N1.

For its international afternoon, pupils, teachers and parents entertained guests with Turkish dancing, a fashion show, steel band and choir performance. There was also a routine from SPLAT's circus skills company and music from DJ Devon.

Hannah Robertson, one of the organisers of the 9 July event, said: “We had food stalls from Africa, Turkey, India and an English cake stall, which all went down very well.

“Everyone found it interesting experiencing little bits from the cultures of their fellow pupils. We made over £600 for school funds, which was also a great plus to the day.”

Tips for high flyers

THE founder of one of the largest outsourcing companies in the UK led a Skinners' Company's School for Girls class to encourage a new generation of high flyers.

Former Capita Group chairman

Rod Aldridge (right) headed a GCSE Business Studies lesson at the school, focusing on how the new budget will affect the economy and their own lives.

Rod encouraged academic attainment and advised pupils to keep an open mind when exploring careers. He also backed entrepreneurship as providing opportunities for personal and economic growth.

“If they take away the message that they can succeed by applying an entrepreneurial mindset to their lives, then I will feel the session was worthwhile,” he said.

Retiring from Capita four years ago, Rod set up The Aldridge Foundation, which aims to inspire young people through education and entrepreneurship.

The visit was organised by educational charity Teach First.

Up for debate

ASPECTS of voting reform were keenly argued during a debating competition involving A-level students from Hackney Community College.

Two teams of three pitted their wits against each other in a competition that focused on ways to increase voter participation: reducing the voting age to 16; allowing non-UK citizens the right to vote; and making voting compulsory. The event was organised by UBS and was the culmination of a four-week internship programme at the financial company. Before the 21 July contest, held at UBS' city offices, both teams attended a series of training sessions on presentation, advocacy and negotiation skills.

Sneh Brahmabhatt, whose team helped convince the audience to disagree with compulsory voting and votes for non-UK citizens, was chosen by judges as the best speaker.

REVIEW

SOMEWHERE in every musician I hope there's a geek – a little person fixated on studying music at the cost of developing the stage persona. Taking that to its logical conclusion, maybe it could be called 'Hot Chip syndrome'.

Symptoms include a machine-like, comprehensive knowledge of modern music, mechanically perfect concerts and the ability to make fantastic electronic pop. Can cause furious, appreciative chin stroking among fans at Lovebox.

Dreaming of Hot Chip

Hackney-born Paloma Faith (above) and the merry-go-round (below)

By Marcel Reinard*Continued from p17

The festival is now in its eighth year and boasted a roster – including Hot Chip – of Dizzee Rascal, Paloma Faith and the original art rockers Roxy Music. Sunday arguably focused more on disco with Chromeo, Peaches, Cut Copy, Horse Meat Disco, Jocelyn Brown and irrepressible headliner Grace Jones. Many have commented on her youthful appearance having little bearing to her age of 61, but her star quality surpasses any superficial references, as does the back catalogue of exceptionally good dub and funk. She performs better than many of her contemporaries could dream of, and even Hot Chip summoned up all of their collective emotions to nod their heads in quiet appreciation.

Hot from the streetREVIEW

Staff Benda Bilili

By Miranda Yates*Staff Benda Bilili, Hackney Empire, Mare Street, E8, 20 July

HOT, hot, hot, both inside the sweltering Empire and on the stage as this Congolese band got into their groove.

The music was utterly relentless, tirelessly dynamic, and layered in earthiness with vocal harmonies that cut a clear pathway through all the crazy stuff.

Apparently Benda Bilili's tunes come straight off the streets of the Congo, and it's true these former street-dwellers do exude a truly exotic energy that's a far melodic cry from Mare Street – even at 28 degrees. What's served up is witty stuff; a blend of roots music, blues and Cuban drum rhythms that will only ever allow you to leave the dance floor when you can barely breathe your fifth request for an encore.

The name 'Staff Benda Bilili' means 'look beyond appearances', a reference to the band's disabilities – all the musicians had polio as children, and appear on stage in wheelchairs and on crutches, in hats and in a line across the stage that never stopped dancing.

The musicians – who inspired a French documentary about their lives and appeared at the Cannes Film Festival to a standing ovation – have an uncanny ability to make their disabilities appear and disappear, as the show goes on.

When one singer gets out of his wheelchair we're reminded; but when he dances like there's no tomorrow, down low on the stage floor, you stop seeing, until he jumps back into the chair.

What we have in Staff Benda Bilili is wise musicians in wicked control of their audience – and don't they just love it.

Shakespeare in Zimbabwe

PREVIEW The two gentlemen in action

By Marcel Reinard

Vakomana Vaviri Ve Zimbabwe, Rich Mix, Bethnal Green Rd, E1, 13-14 August

Full of humour and sparkle, a new performance at Rich Mix takes one of Shakespeare's earliest and least known plays and transports it from Verona and Milan to Zimbabwe's Harare and Bulawayo. Vakomana Vaviri Ve Zimbabwe – like the original text, the Two Gentlemen of Verona – follows friends Valentine and Proteus as they compete for the love of the same woman. As one is exiled, and both are driven apart by jealousy, each don disguises and cultivate their own acts of deception to rescue the friendship.

With only each other to work with, actors Denton Chikura and Tonderai Munyevu take on all the play's 15 roles – including amorous suitors and a dog – using only a few items of clothing and an old suitcase as props. Producer Arne Pohlmeier has won praise for tackling issues of alienation and power struggles that echo the political difficulties of Zimbabwe.

But he also puts on a high-energy, warm show, that brings a new take to the 15th century play, and audiences so far have welcomed the production's unpredictability.

Thomas Whitehead return to the party basement for their monthly dance affair. Expect to hear a wild and wonderful celebration of genres from disco, post punk, early house and beyond, accompanied by a suitably wild visual mix constructed each month. The Drop, 175 Stoke Newington High St, N16 0LH.

NEWS IN BRIEFMedia passion

A GROUP of teenagers have been involved in making a film exploring young people's journey into adulthood. The feature-length production 'Coming Of Age' has been developed by young people from Hackney, with help from youth media company, Mouth That Roars (MTR).

The film follows Moses, a young man with a passion for media, and his friends as they deal with the trials and tribulations that young adulthood presents. The project is supported by the National Children's Bureau, British Film Institute and Hackney Council. 'Coming of Age' is due to be premiered at London's BFI on 7 August. Sports celebration

THE sporting achievements of young people, coaches and clubs were celebrated at the annual Hackney Youth Sport Fund Awards.

The event, organised by the Council's Leisure & Physical Activity Team, showcased an array of talent, from grassroots to those representing Great Britain. In total, 34 applicants received funding in a variety of sports ranging from fencing to girls rugby to sitting volleyball.

Omarie Mears, 16, was one of the young people who were presented with an award by Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe. The talented young weightlifter attends Cardinal Pole Catholic School. In May, Omarie was crowned British Schools Champion, and he also claimed the weightlifting gold at this year's London Youth Games.

The Council set up the Youth Sports Fund after receiving £300,000 from Nike for using the borough's logo on a range of sportswear, without permission. It will run until 2012. For info visit:

Vision for the park

By
Felicity Jump

A GROUP of Hackney young people were given the opportunity to share their views on how the Olympic Park should look after the 2012 Games.

The 'Our Time' event on 30 July, was hosted by The Olympic Park Legacy Company, which has been working with Fundamental Architectural Inclusion, based in Stratford, to set up a Legacy Youth Panel. Its 30 young members, aged from 13 to 21, come from

"I can see how things are going to change for the better in Hackney" the five host boroughs for the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games and are helping shape legacy plans to develop and animate the park over the next 25 years.

At mobile performance venue The Lift, in Canning Town, the panel – which included five Hackney members – presented their ideas to 100 other young people. They used multi-media exhibitions and interactive sessions, in a bid to encourage more young people to get involved.

Among their proposals were more cultural events on site, landmark and recreational buildings, and seasonal attractions such as a summer beach, ice rink and ski slopes.

Panel member Shaneice Bailey, 15, from Cardinal Pole RC Secondary School, in Hackney, says: "Being a member of the Youth Panel has given me some amazing opportunities to meet Olympic officials and share my views with them. I can see how things are going to change for the better in Hackney."

Road safety and red carpets

A HOST of young people turned out for the premiere of a film that aims to help communicate road safety messages.

'Concrete Dreams' was shown to an audience of invited guests at the Arcola Theatre on 30 July. MMC, a group of young people from Hackney, aged 15 to 19, proudly premiered the film they have produced, directed and starred in.

Production assistant, Ethan May, explained the decision for making a film for people their own age: "It started with statistics. We did a survey of over 200 young people from two different schools in Hackney and realised that only 14 per cent actually remember the road safety messages aimed at them."

The 15-minute film is intended to be used by schools, community organisations and youth groups, and will also be put on YouTube and Facebook.

'Concrete Dreams' is the result of a project organised by the Council's Road Safety Team, in partnership with Abbot Street Studios, African Caribbean Development Foundation and Dbiz8 Empowerment Consultancy.

Statistics have revealed that 92 per cent of Hackney mothers try breastfeeding

All stories by
Marcel Reinard

HACKNEY mums who think they would like to try breastfeeding can now access a range of new online information.

NHS City and Hackney marked World Breastfeeding Week, from 1-7 August, by launching an updated 'feeding your baby' section on its website. Content includes information about the benefits of breastfeeding for mums and babies, and a new 'myths and facts' section to help parents understand the facts about breastfeeding.

We want to make sure Hackney mothers have all the support and information they need

The NHS and Council joint director of public health, Dr Lesley

Mountford, said: "Breastfeeding can be a little scary for some women, and we recognise it can take time to establish a regular feeding pattern between mothers and babies.

"We want to make sure Hackney mothers have all the support and information they need, and the website is just part of our overall commitment to this."

Recent statistics have revealed that more than 92 per cent of Hackney's new mothers give breastfeeding a try, compared to less than 73 per cent nationally.

Regular breastfeeding drop-in groups, staffed by health professionals, are run every day across the borough. They are open to pregnant women and parents who would like support or information about breastfeeding.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The Headway team at the British 10k

Giving something back

RUNNERS from Headway East London have raised £2,680 at this year's Asics British 10k run – with one describing the experience as a chance to 'give something back' to the brain injury charity.

Volunteers, supporters and two brain injury survivors faced tough conditions and tougher competition in their efforts for Headway on a hot 11 July.

Matt, a Hackney resident who sustained a brain injury two years ago, said: "I was super nervous before the run. The responsibility of sponsorship was weighing heavily upon my shoulders, but in the end it was a blast."

Headway East London supports people affected by acquired brain injury and the money raised will contribute to physical therapies to help people reach their goal of independence. Matt added: "I raised some money for Headway East London who have consistently supported me following a head injury in 2008. In that time I've seen the work they do and wanted to be able to give something back."

Health survey results

PROPOSALS to reorganise health services in North East London have received broad support from residents.

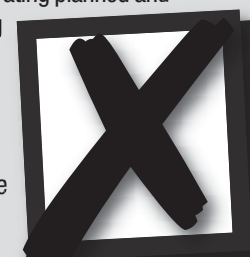

These include the principle of separating planned and emergency surgery, and separating children's and adults' A&E departments.

During the Health For North-East London survey, documents were distributed to around 10,000 people outlining the proposals developed by patients, doctors, nurses and other health care professionals on how services across the area could be improved.

More than 3,000 residents and organisations responded to the four-month long consultation, which ended in March. The results were published last month.

The news coincides with the Government's instruction that all NHS health trusts should review their reorganisation proposals with GPs and local authorities to further test regional support. Health For North East London added no decision will be made on any of the proposals until this happens and feedback has been reviewed.

Full consultation results can be found at: www.healthforneel.nhs.uk/consultation/results-of-the-consultation

Numbers of quitters on the rise

NEARLY 2,500 people have quit smoking for at least four weeks in the past year, helped by local NHS services.

NHS City and Hackney said new stop smoking services had supported 2,453 residents to quit in 2009/10, almost 500 more than its target.

Stop smoking support is available throughout the borough from pharmacists, GPs, health advocates and drop-in

There is a wide range of support for residents who want to quit clinics. Awareness of these services is low however, so the local NHS teamed up with Boots to offer a special price promotion to give quitters an extra boost, that proved a big hit. Street recruitment also took place at targeted intervals during the year, offering people the opportunity to join stop smoking clinics, and a drop-in clinic was set up at Homerton hospital for the Turkish community, which has high rates of smoking.

'The School's lone porch, with reverend mosses gray,
Just tells the pensive pilgrim where it lay.
Mute is the bell that rung at peep of dawn,
Quick'ning my truant-feet across the lawn...' The Pleasures of Memory

A poet with many layers

By Sally England
Local Studies Librarian

POET Samuel Rogers was born in a house that once stood on the corner of Newington Green in 1763 – when the area was still a rural location away from the hectic bustle of the City of London.

Young Samuel studied at local schools, firstly that of a Mr Cockburn in Hackney, and then with James Burgh, a radical Scottish politician, author, and educationalist.

Burgh's school was just across the green from Rogers' home, and may well have inspired some of the lines from his most famous poem, 'The Pleasures of Memory'.

Rogers wanted to become a Presbyterian minister. But his father, a City banker, insisted that his son follow in his professional footsteps. Each day Samuel walked to work in Cornhill, reading the poetry of Thomas Gray on the way, and soon determined that, in fact, he wanted to become a writer. Samuel Johnson was his great hero, along with Oliver Goldsmith and Gray.

Aged 18, he had his first articles published in 'The Gentleman's Magazine', and five years later in 1786, his anonymous poem 'An Ode To Superstition' received positive reviews.

In 1792, 'The Pleasures of Memory' was published, again anonymously, to an excellent reception. Byron said 'there is not a vulgar line in the poem', and an edition of the 1830s illustrated by Turner and Stothard became one of the most successful late Romantic illustrated books.

At 21, Rogers had been made a partner in his father's bank, and he became head of the firm at 30. Aged 40, he was able to retire with an income of £5,000 a year and he entertained himself by collecting art and giving celebrated breakfast parties – and very select dinners – at his new home in the City. He became renowned for his caustic wit at the table.

He was a great supporter of younger writers, including Charles Dickens, who dedicated 'The Old Curiosity Shop' to him. On one occasion when Rogers dined with Dickens, the novelist later remembered that the drunken poet 'had to be borne out, having fallen sick at the table.'

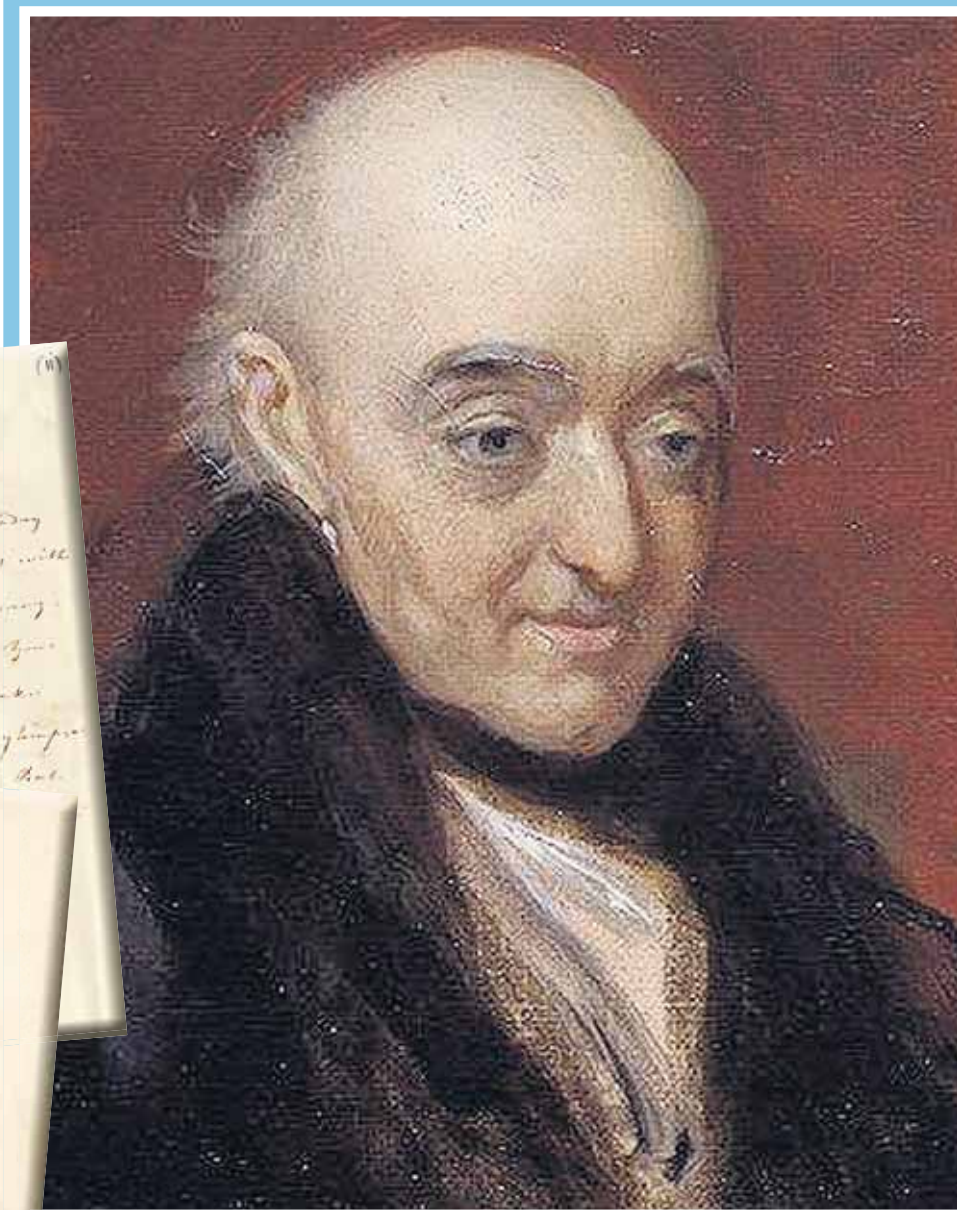

'I helped Rogers on with his over-shoes for his usual night-walk home. "Do you know how many waistcoats I wear?" asked the poet of me, as I was doing him this service. I professed my inability to guess. "Five!" he said: "and here they are!"

'Upon which he opened them, in the manner of the gravedigger in Hamlet, and showed me every one.'

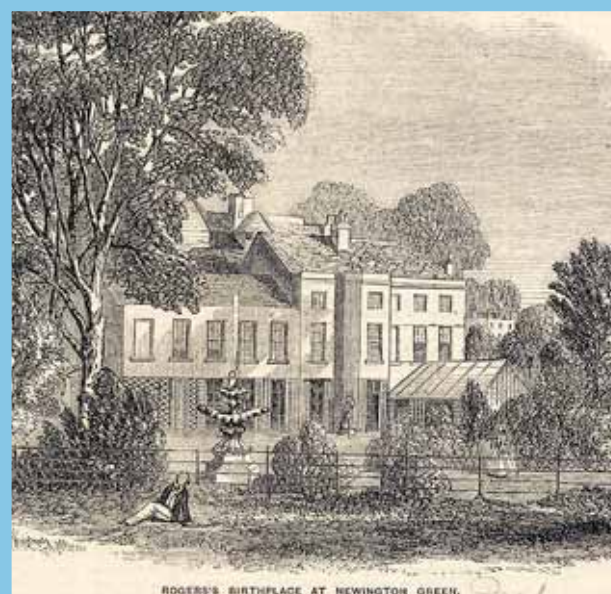

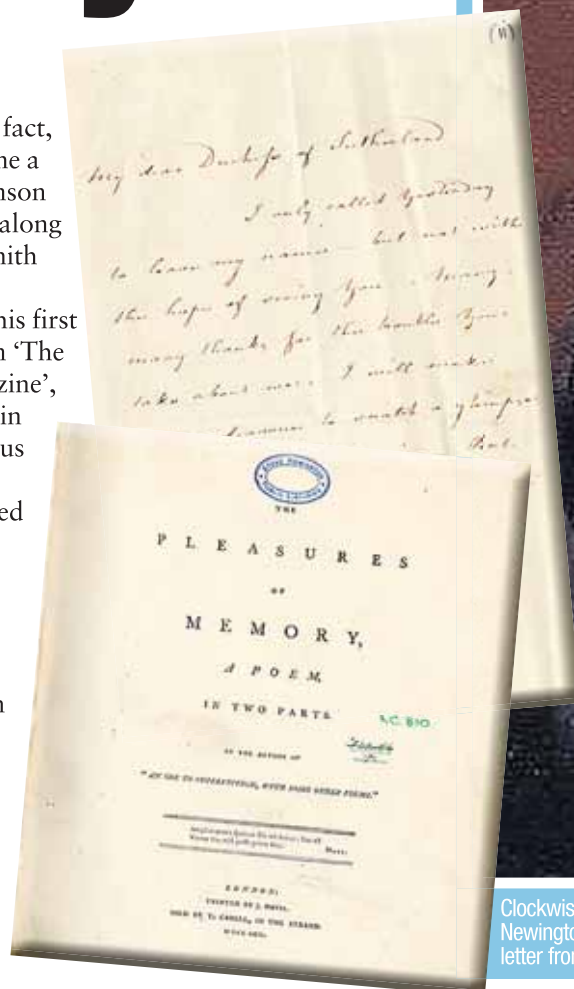

Rogers' output was small and slow – 'Human Life' published in 1819 had taken 12 years to write – but he was greatly revered in literary circles and was a friend of Wordsworth and Scott as well as Byron and Shelley whom he visited in Italy, and also Fox, Burke, Talleyrand and the Duke of Wellington amongst many others in the political sphere.

Towards the end of his life, Rogers paid a farewell visit to his childhood home at Newington Green. He was reported as having said that he regretted having parted with it.

Samuel Rogers died at his home in St James's Place in December 1855, and was buried in the family vault in Hornsey churchyard. He left three paintings from his art collection to the National Gallery, the rest, along with his library, being sold for £50,000 at an auction lasting over three weeks.

Hackney Council is committed to improving services, increasing opportunities for all, and making a safer, cleaner, greener borough. Here we focus on a service that helps to make this possible:

SUPPORTING THE HELPING HANDS

Frances Harve, Counselling Support Officer

Frances has been supporting CRT volunteers, who are a key part of the team, for eight years. She trains them in communication, as well as how to help older people suffering from abuse, bereavement and loss. She also provides emotional back-up. Frances is proud to be part of the recruitment process for CRT volunteers and feels lucky to regularly meet people who are willing to go that extra mile for Hackney's older people. Frances also works with community organisations to deliver training on dementia, mental health, emergency first aid and self management. She said: "I enjoy the challenges in my role and the rewarding working relationships I have developed with my colleagues and the volunteers. "But most importantly, I enjoy the benefits and the joy that our dedicated volunteers bring to the older people who would have been lonely and socially excluded in the community without the CRT."

By Danielle
Beattie

FOR residents who are less able to get out and about, Hackney's Community Resource Team (CRT) is there to offer a helping hand.

Through a combination of Council staff and keen volunteers, the CRT offers support to older residents to help them lead independent lives that are free from isolation and social exclusion.

A befriending service helps over-50s and housebound people meet new friends through services such as teleconferencing, where six people can come together for a chat on any subject of their choice.

Wheelchair support helps residents get out for special occasions and the Two's Company service sees trained volunteers assist residents on hospital and GP visits, shopping trips or just a stroll through the park.

In partnership with a number of local community groups and voluntary sector organisations, the team host a range of free events and activities such as the ever popular tea dances, and the Festival for Older People, now in its 17th year.

There is also the New Age Games, which gives older residents and adults with learning disabilities the chance to challenge themselves and each other in activities such as swimming, soca aerobics, kayaking, archery, shot put, javelin and walking.

THE steely determination on the face of one pupil from Southwold primary's virtual Tour de France race shows just how serious the school is getting about cycling.

Southwold set up a live projection of the event in Event organiser and cycling officer, Kate Searle, said it gave the children a chance to see 'how fast and far the Tour de France riders go'.

Gustavo uses some pedal power at Hackney City Farm

Ditch the bus with a farm bike

HACKNEY City Farm has unveiled its own cycle rental scheme – just for commuters using the number 55 bus. Those more used to waiting at Hackney Road stops near the farm – at Warner Place, Queensbridge Road, and Pritchard Road – can hire a bike for a day, for the same price as a bus fare.

The farm's Environment and Enterprise Manager, Gustavo Montes de Oca, said: "A lot of it came from personal experience when I had to get the bus. In rush hour there can be huge queues, and we're right next to a major cycle route so it just made sense."

Currently six hybrid bikes are available, all with pannier racks, shock absorbers and mud and chain guards.

The farm also provides locks, helmets and 'bike buddies' – experienced cyclists who can help new riders gain confidence on the road. Gustavo added the farm is still looking for more experienced riders to volunteer for this part of the scheme.

Bus Stop Cycle Start is funded by the Community Cycling Fund for London, which gave the farm a £4,933 grant in June to help different community groups get on their bikes. If you would like more info, or would like to become a bike buddy, call: 020 7729 6381; or e-mail:

Green buses win prizes

LONDON Buses has won the Low Carbon Champion Award for reducing carbon (CO2) emissions in its fleet.

The company, which forms part of Transport for London (TfL), was recognised in the bus category by Low Carbon Vehicle Partnership for its commitment to greener travel in the capital. Judges praised TfL as a whole for its work getting low CO2 buses used nationally.

There are currently 56 hybrid buses – powered by diesel and an electric motor – operating in London, with the first introduced in February 2006. In 2012, the new hybrid Routemasters (left) will come into service to form part of the 300 other hybrids set to be in use by this date.

The LowCVP Low Carbon Champion Awards recognise best practice in vehicle manufacturers, fuel suppliers, fleet operators and developers of products and services that reduce greenhouse gases from the road transport sector.

Sign up to ride around town

LONDON'S newest transport system has opened for business.

To use the Barclays Cycle Hire Scheme during August, residents need to register as a member before receiving a key to unlock the bikes. The first users will show which areas the bikes are most used in. The scheme will open to casual pay-as-you-go users later this year.

The key costs £3 and there are membership fees of £1 for 24-hours; £5 for seven days; and £45 for a year. There is also an access fee for the time the bike is used during the day, with the first 30 minutes of any journey being free.

People using the bikes will be able to pick up and drop off one of the 6,000 hire bicycles at around 400 locations in central London, 24-hours a day.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, headed to Shoreditch High Street – one of 14 Hackney docking points – to give the scheme a try. She said: "It's great this scheme is finally off the ground. I know many people in the borough are eager to sign up, so they can start cycling. I certainly enjoyed giving one of the bikes a road test and I'm looking forward to doing it again in the near future."

Job Profile Murthy Balakrishnan

Trading Standards Manager, talks to Hackney Today about the Senior/Principal Commercial Standards Officer role

Why is the Trading Standards Team a good place to work?

The work we do is not only varied and interesting, but it is also incredibly rewarding. Everyone feels annoyed when they hear about people being ripped off, and we can practically help residents. The team is tight-knit, highly motivated and professional and everyone is really supportive. We all have our own areas of expertise and all officers are given the opportunity to explore and research their area.

What makes this a rewarding job?

It's really satisfying to empower residents to make informed purchasing decisions in a borough that has such a diverse population. The service puts out warnings and pre-shopping advice and reacts very quickly to issues. It's also rewarding to give high-quality trader advice to small businesses in the borough. Feedback has been very positive. The job can be exciting, but it also has a problem-solving side that is really satisfying.

What are the main challenges?

One of the key challenges is meeting the needs of hard to reach communities in Hackney who may have concerns, but don't know who to contact for help. We also need to come up with new ways to use the resources that we have effectively, and balance nationally-driven projects and policies with local needs.

What attributes will the successful candidate have?

They will need to be very resourceful, a good team player and someone who can demonstrate that they are both innovative and practical, with excellent problem solving skills. They should have experience in most areas of Trading Standards work and be adept at managing a challenging workload. They'll need to be flexible and work unsociable hours on occasions.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Hoxton Apprentice

www.hoxtonapprentice.com

Serpil Dogan, 24, from Hackney, found it difficult to find employment to meet her childcare needs. With no previous experience, she decided to test her skills in the food and hospitality industry after her daughter, who is now six, started school. Serpil is now an apprentice chef training in the kitchen, as well as picking up some front of house skills. She is enjoying learning how to cook food from different cultures, and working with the rest of the kitchen staff. Serpil said: "Working at the Hoxton Apprentice has really widened my knowledge of the food industry; there is so much I didn't know. I also feel more confident talking and working with people and my communication skills have improved." Her ambition is to own her own restaurant serving a mixture of British and Turkish food in the next five years.

Poached chicken with vegetables

Serves 2

Preparation time
30mins

Cooking time
1hr 30mins

Ingredients

- 1 small organic corn-fed chicken
- 1 litre chicken stock
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 125g baby turnips, peeled and halved
- 125g small carrots
- 75g curly kale leaves torn into strips
- 75g frozen peas
- 25g butter
- 60g mushrooms
- 50g butter
- 2tbsp olive oil

Method

- Place chicken and stock in pan. Cover, bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer for

The Council is consulting on a revised Licensing Policy, which sets out clear guidelines on how licensed businesses will help the Council and police drive down anti-social behaviour, public disorder, noise nuisance and crime that is related to licensed premises. The proposals look at practical ways of working to ensure the balance is right in Hackney's lively town centres – including Shoreditch, Dalston and Stoke Newington – so that businesses thrive and people can keep coming to Hackney for a great night out, without disturbing residents or spoiling their quality of life. A series of drop-in sessions for residents and businesses that want to find out more about the proposals will be held in October. See future issues of Hackney Today and the Council website for details nearer the time. The Mayor & Councillors Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Help get the balance right in Hackney's thriving town centres

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm
